MRS. ELLEN RAFFERTY DIES OF INJURIES RECEIVED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE ON LINCOLN HIGHWAY NEAR LANGHORNE

WAS WELL KNOWN HERE

Deceased Resided in Fourth
Ward for Over Fifty Years

In a series of automobile accidents occurring over the week-end two women, one of whom was a resident of Bristol, were killed and six other persons were injured.

The dead:
Miss Anna Polski, 21, 2804 N. Broad street, Philadelphia.

Mrs. Ellen Rafferty, 151 Buckley street, Bristol.

Mrs. Rafferty, a well-known and highly respected resident of the Fourth Ward, Bristol, was run down by a Trenton motorist on the Lincoln Highway near the Langhorne race track, Saturday afternoon. A daughter and a grandson witnessed the tragedy as they sat in the Rafferty car waiting for the woman who was injured. The Bristol woman died in St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, about an hour after the accident.

Joseph T. Bruno, 25, 577 Brunswick avenue, Trenton, was arrested by Highway Patrolman Vincent J. Coughlin, and placed under a technical charge of manslaughter. He is released under $2000 bail before Justice of Peace Joseph Keating, Langhorne.

Details as to the manner in which the accident happened, vary. Mrs.
Rafferty's daughter who accompanied her has been suffering from nervous shock since the affair, and unable to give an account of just what took place.

It was stated, however, at the scene of the accident, that the Bristol woman had crossed the highway to purchase fruit at a roadside stand and was returning when she was struck.

Mrs. Rafferty was the wife of John C. Rafferty and was identified with several activities. She was a member of the American Legion Auxiliary of Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382;
Blessed Virgin Sodality of St. Mark's
Church; and Bristol Court, No. 1097, Catholic Daughters of America.

The deceased was a native of Summit Hill, Pa., and had resided in Bristol for over 50 years. She is survived by her husband and ten children.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday morning with solemn requiem mass in St. Mark's Church at 10 o'clock. Burial will be in St. Mark's Cemetery.

Miss Polski, met death when a machine crashed into two trees on the State Road at Andalusia. She received a fracture of the skull and was pronounced dead on arrival at Frankford Hospital.

Her companion, Maurice Winnemore, 29 years old, of 1714 Green street, Philadelphia, is in the same hospital suffering from a fractured hip, scalp wounds and cuts of the body.

MIDDLETOWN CHILD HAS INFANTILE PARALYSIS

Case is That of Mildred Myers,
2, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Deaver Myers

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN

LANGHORNE, Sept. 19.—The four lower grades of Langhorne public schools were closed today, following the reporting of a case of infantile paralysis to health authorities Saturday. The school board will conduct a meeting this evening to determine whether these grades shall remain closed.

The case reported Saturday is that of Mildred Myers, aged 2, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Deaver Myers, Middletown Township, just outside of Langhorne borough. The child was removed to Abington Hospital Saturday.
The attending physician is Dr. Mack-mail.

As a precaution against the spread of the malady, the Methodist Sunday School here was closed yesterday; while in the primary department of the Presbyterian School also had sessions suspended.

This, according to Bucks County health authorities, is the only case in lower Bucks County, and is the third in Bucks County. The first case was at Doylestown, a second occurring several days later at Perkasie.

All possible precautions are being taken against the spread of the disease, and parents are being urged to keep their small children from assembling in public places.

Recalls Other Fire-Bugs

(By "The Stroller")

The presence of a fire-bug in Bristol, and his successful efforts in starting so many fires without being detected, reminds me of a similar period in my early boyhood, when the work of an incendiary caused the citizens no end of worry and anxiety.

In the year 1873, Fire Company No. 1 purchased a new Sibley fire engine. It was around this time that many fires of incendiary origin were occurring.

Near the overflow to the canal, south of Mill street, stood a large stable where the horses and mules used on the canal were boarded. One night this stable was set on fire and a large number of horses and mules burned to death.

No. 1 Fire Company responded with its new Sibley engine, but as the firemen were guiding the apparatus down the roadway on the west side of the canal, which ran between the canal and Modus Stroble's harness-making shop, the smoke-stack on the engine struck the railroad bridge and was broken off. A barrel was quickly obtained and substituted for the smoke-stack, but the apparatus got into service too late to save the building.

The person responsible for the fire was never publicly apprehended. Years went by and one day I was talking with an old resident about the events of our boyhood, and one of us mentioned the destruction of this stable by fire. To my amazement, my friend told me the name of the incendiary and how the information had come to him.

The young man who was responsible for setting the stable on fire was the son of a prominent and highly-respected business man of the town. He possessed a mania for setting places on fire, and inasmuch as he was known by a few to have been the incendiary, I am of the opinion that the prominence of his father prevented his arrest and prosecution.

This young man has been dead for many years, as are also the companions of his early years. The one who imparted the information to me passed away recently. Perhaps I am the only one in possession of the secret today.

GERMANY DETERMINED
Berlin, Germany, Sept. 19.—Germany today was as determined as ever to gain armament equality despite the British government's sharp memorandum rejecting the legality of the German demand and placing Great Britain squarely beside France in the armament controversy with the Reich. The nation, as shown by newspaper comment in the words of government officials, was shocked at the tenor of the British statement, which was handed to Foreign Minister von Neu-rath by the British minister. Government spokesmen however were insistent on no opposition, not even that of Great Britain, France or the United States combined would prevent her from seeking to break the armament shackles and the Treaty of Versailles.
The British statement criticized the German demand for arms equality as "untimely and unwise" and as threatening to impose an obstacle to the disarmament conference and the principle of disarmament.

BROUGHT TO HOSPITAL

CROYDON, Sept. 19.—Eugene Mc-Donald, 6, 236 West Atlantic street,
Philadelphia, drowned in the Neshaminy
Creek, here, yesterday afternoon, and although the little fellow was in the water only five minutes all efforts to revive him failed.

The lad along with other members of his family were guests of his grandmother, Mrs. Sara Schwartz. The child's mother and father and the four other children were heart-broken over the tragic end of the outing.

The youngster was playing on a pier
at Belmont avenue and Neshaminy Road when he accidentally toppled into the water. Neighbors attracted to the scene jumped into the water and dragged the boy to the shore. Chief of Police Lintford J. Jones, Bristol, and Constable Harry Oliver, Bensalem
Township, were called. Both men worked over the lad with the pulmotor but without result. He was pronounced dead by Dr. Gonzales.

Despite the fact that the boy was pronounced dead the body was taken to the Harriman Hospital, Bristol, but life was extinct, it was stated at that institution.

TRAVEL CLUB COSTUME WINS PRIZE OF $100

Copy of Gown of Miss Sally
Keene Brings Honors
Here

YORK ROAD PAGEANT

First honors in the Old York Road
Historical Pageant, staged under auspices of Strawbridge & Clothier, were accorded to the Bristol Travel Club, Saturday evening.

The pageant, in which 14 women's clubs from Bucks and Montgomery counties each entered a costume suggestive of the early part of the 18th century, was staged each day last week in the auditorium of the department store, on Old York Road.

The costume which brought first prize of $100 to Bristol was copied from that of Miss Sally Keene, a young woman well-known in early Bristol history. Four members of the local club fashioned the costume of white satin, using a picture of Miss Keene, which hangs in the Keene home, here,
as a guide. The gown was cut low, with a high Empire waistline. These fashioning the dress were: Mrs. Theodore E. Megargee, Mrs. Paul Forster, Mrs. E. Linton Martin, and Mrs.
George E. Boswell.

During the pageant the gown made by the Travel Club members was worn on alternate days by Mrs. Megargee and Miss Elizabeth Runyan. The announcement of the winning clubs was first made Saturday evening from a Philadelphia radio station.

Upon hearing the announcement,
the many members of the Travel Club, listening in, were overjoyed. Second honors, with a prize of $50, were accorded to a North Wales club; and third, with $25 in prize money, to a club from Fox Chase.

The judges were: Violet Oakley, mural artist; George Gibbs, novelist;
and Henry Fitz, illustrator and authority on early American costumes.
Judging was done by points. A number of Bristol people witnessed the attractive pageant during the six days it was staged last week.

Miss Sarah Lukens Keene, one of whose costumes was used as a copy for Bristol's winning model, was a niece of Major Lenox, who represented the U. S. Government at the court of St. James, and who was a resident of Bristol for many years. The Keene Mansion, located on Radcliffe street, was built as Miss Keene's residence, which she occupied many years after the Major's death. Miss Lenox was a woman of great beauty, as well as of mental culture. It is stated in Green's History of Bristol in reference to Miss Keene, that "during the residence of

Woman, 50, Undernourished, Found Wandering in Woods

A woman 50 years of age was found wandering in the woods adjacent to the Polish Cemetery, Bensalem Township, by Constable Harry Oliver, yesterday.

The woman, apparently deranged,
was suffering from lack of nourishment and could not give Constable Oliver any definite information concerning herself. She is about six feet tall and very thin. Her clothing was badly torn.

In being questioned by Constable Oliver the woman gave her name as Margaret Shick. She gave two addresses, both being in Lancaster. One is 114 Plum street and the other 594
Chestnut street.

The woman was brought to the Municipal Building at Bristol, where she is being detained until her home can be located.

THREE MORE FIRES ADDED TO RECORD OF FIRE-BUG TERRORIZING RESIDENTS OF BRISTOL'S BUSINESS DISTRICT

Garage Blaze Looked Threatening and Attracted Large Crowd to Mill and Radcliffe Streets, Last Evening—Two Automobiles Fired During the Night at Manera Garage—Police and Firemen Put Forth Every Effort to Capture the Guilty Person.

Another building and two more automobiles were set afire by Bristol's alleged fire-bug early Sunday evening and this morning. The number of fires attributed to the fire-bug since September 15th now total 10. Five automobiles, four buildings and a freight car comprise the record. All of the losses have been small, except in one instance, due to the prompt manner in which the Consolidated Fire Department has responded.

A blaze discovered at 8.34 last evening threatened for a time to endanger the business district where the fire-bug has confined most of his activity.

The fire was in the garage of Samuel Mignoni, Mill and Radcliffe street, and it is believed that gasoline from the tank of an automobile added fuel to the flames and caused them to be of a threatening nature. A coupe in the garage was considerably damaged.

The second call for the firemen was at one o'clock this morning when an antiquated truck near Pond and Market streets was found ablaze.

Shortly before 5 o'clock this morning the firemen were called to the garage of Ralph Manera, Market street and the highway, where an automobile standing outside had been ignited.
The fire in this machine had been started between the cushions on the seats, as has been the case in other instances when automobiles have been set afire.

Police and firemen are working jointly in their efforts to apprehend the fire-bug but so far have been unsuccessful. Last night a thorough search of the land south of Mill street was made, following the Mignoni blaze.

Several youths were closely questioned by the police last night without any definite information being obtained.

The two men taken into custody early Saturday morning by the police were both released after they had proven their innocence. The men, Walter Saxton, Bristol, and Edgar G. Fleuti, Florida, a former resident here, proved to the authorities that they were not near the scenes of the fires at any time nor were they in any way responsible for them.

The arrest of Saxton and Fleuti was brought about through descriptions given the police of men seen acting suspiciously in the vicinity of Mill street. After talking with the pair the police were convinced that they were in no way guilty.

Residents of the business section have become aroused and entertain fears that the fire-bug will succeed in starting a fire which will result disastrously. Many of them searched their buildings last night following the latest outbreaks.

All the fires except one have been in the Mill street section. A box car along Trenton avenue in the vicinity of Jackson street, was the only fire to occur out of the business district.

The Manera fires were discovered by Officers Ferry and Pollard, while the Mignoni blaze was discovered by William Dougherty and Officer Ferry.

FEDERAL INCOME GAINS

Washington, which was thoroughly depressed by the early results of the new Federal revenue law, has taken a more hopeful viewpoint as regards a balanced budget since September 1. Up to that date the treasury was not so sure that the new taxes might not defeat their own purpose.

After running behind last year during July and August, miscellaneous tax receipts jumped sharply during the first week of September. Last year receipts for that period were $6,400,000. This year the figure was $21,100,000, an increase of 240 per cent.

Federal revenue now has a 16 per cent lead over the preceding fiscal year, but this is no criterion of the effect of the new tax law on Uncle Sam's strong box. In these uncertain times revenue is as unreliable as the weather. Today's gains may be lost tomorrow.

It is easy to take the pessimistic viewpoint and look for the growing deficit to keep on growing by leaps and bounds, but it doesn't overtax one's optimism to expect further gains in revenue from now on. Though the higher postal rates and income taxes may not bring in the expected revenue due to less mail and diminishing incomes, the amusement, gasoline and check taxes are proving certain and rich sources of revenue.

Because the miscellaneous tax features of the new revenue law did not become generally effective with the beginning of the fiscal year, sufficient time has not yet elapsed to indicate the full results. The whole story will not be known until income tax returns are made next March.

ABOLISHING K. P.

As if enough of our time-honored traditions have not already passed into limbo the regular army contemplates the abandonment of "kitchen police" duty at posts, forts and barracks within the United States. The plan under consideration is to employ civilian help to man the mop and paring knife.

Here, however, is a tradition that will pass, if it does, unannounced, though perhaps not unsung. Navy a regular army man will shed a tear over its loss. For "K. P." is a sickening thing.

Despised of men as it is, where will "kitchen police" duty find an effective substitute? You military psychologists, every sergeant challenges you to name something just as good for what it is good for.

The combination of a mess sergeant, a mop and a buck private's own knowledge that he couldn't be fired and he couldn't quit achieved miracles of disillusionment. For many raw recruits it has been a baptism in real soldiering.

"K. P." never hurt anybody, but neither did it ever do anybody any good in his own estimation. It is fine discipline and no one likes discipline.

Perhaps the high command will abandon the idea. If not before it experiments a little, then after it does experiment a little.

A farm war would be just the thing in case of a tomato surplus.

BENSALEM TOWNSHIP

The annual outing of the Logan Ice Manufacturing Co. was held at the Turner Country Club Thursday. Over 300 persons were present for the festivities. The management of the affair was perfect, due to H. K. Peters, manager of the company, and H. R. Clemens, chief engineer of the plant.

The rivalry in the quoit pitching contest was intense. George Peters and Harry Greever defeated H. R. Clemens and H. Wynn by the score of 21 to 20. This game was one of the many closely contested affairs that took place at the outing.

A baseball game featuring the Tacony Branch and Logan Branch turned out to be a one-sided affair and the final score was 20 to 2, favor Tacony.

In this game George Maloney showed his "stuff" at bat and swatted two homers to hold the crowd's interest. Ray Lambert of the Logan Branch made a great play in center field, catching a whale of a wallop that would have been a sure home run and turning the audience into a bedlam with his wonderful stop.

Dinner was served at 6.30, consisting of soup, mashed potatoes, sweet potatoes, steak, celery, sauce, tomatoes, cold slaw, and pie.

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

DAPHNE HAINES, seventeen and lovely, finds life intolerable because of a nagging, jealous stepmother whose main aim is to promote a courtship between her own daughter, Crystal, and wealthy, attractive Ralph McKeivitt. Catching a fleeting glimpse of Daphne, the "prize" young man admires her. Mrs. Haines, fearing the rivalry of the younger girl, schemes to eliminate her from the scene. Daphne dismays when she realizes how completely these two calculating women have her father in their power, comforts herself by spinning secret dreams of a day when someone will really love her—a man, big, powerful, handsome, like Ralph! A sordid quarrel is provoked between Haines and his wife because of the woman's reckless expenditures. Subtly Mrs. Haines draws Daphne into the brawl. Feeling the hopelessness of her situation, Daphne determines to make her own way in the world, and leaves for San Francisco. With twenty dollars capital she seeks employment and learns it is hard to find. Daphne has an unpleasant experience with a prospective employer and in her haste to get away from him, leaves a purse containing her last five dollars in his office. The wolf seems perilously close. Hunger seizes her and she walks the streets wondering what she can buy to eat with a nickel. She decides upon a cup of coffee. At the Java Inn, a cheap restaurant, a young man seems vaguely familiar. On the way home in his car she discovers that her escort is none other than Ralph McKeivitt, her stepfather's "prize" young man. Now life seems warm and rosy!

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XII.

THE strong smell of boiling coffee penetrated Daphne's consciousness. It was morning; old Mrs. Hinckle in the kitchen was preparing her favorite brew. Daphne knew that the old lady slept in the kitchen, on the hard, lumpy couch between the stove and the table. "Aber, sometimes I lay down here. I guess it's good enough for me," she would mumble in her hoarse, guttural old voice if any of the roomers found her there. But they all knew that the other rooms were always rented.

Miss Viola, her daughter, the "Madame Hinckle" of the dress-making sign in the window, slept on the green plush couch in the parlor, and Daphne herself had what had once been the dining room, separated from Miss Viola's parlor by perpetually locked and closed folding doors of dark, varnished wood.

Mrs. Hinckle made coffee twice a day, before breakfast, and before dinner, in a tall blue agate pot with a tin cover. The rest of the day it simmered on the back of the stove, sending out its stale, acrid odor to mingle with the dampness of the halls, the old, musty smell of unaired beds, yellow soap, boiled dinner and the sweet-sour messes that usually shared the place of honor on the back of the stove.

"With the privilege of the kitchen," Miss Viola said when Daphne rented the room, but Daphne had never made use of the privilege. It was bad enough to hurry through it in the mornings on her way to the splashy, dark little bathroom which an absent-minded architect had apparently forgotten until the house was finished, and then nonchalantly placed in a vacant spot on the back porch.

There was always someone in the kitchen. Sometimes it was one of the married women from upstairs, stirring something over the fire or "washing out a little something" in one of the laundry tubs on the back porch. Or Flora McCordle, the tall, blond girl, who had the hall bedroom upstairs and was also out of work. Flora had been disposed to be friendly, but her loud, coarse laugh and her easy ways with the married women's husbands had frightened Daphne away.

Old Mrs. Hinckle had been friendly, too, looking up from her place at the oilcloth covered table to say: "There's coffee on the stove"—she pronounced it shove—"help yourself! Miss Haines, make yourself at home; ach, they all do."

And Daphne had wanted to accept, had wanted to give friendliness for the friendliness they gave her, but a tight, hard shyness held her back.

"Well, if that's the way you feel about it," Flora's shrill seemed to say, and after a while Mrs. Hinckle didn't offer her coffee. "Some don't like it, aber it's good enough for me," she'd mumble, looking after Daphne with eyes hard and black as shoebuttons in her wrinkled old face as Daphne hurried by.

But this particular morning, the morning after she met Ralph McKeivitt, everything was different. The sun was shining, chasing away the fog. A fresh, clean breeze blew through the open window, sweetening the stale air. Her own face, thin and pale as ever, looked different to her as she ran a comb through her hair and smiled to herself, thinking of Ralph. The worries had all slipped away.

"Good morning!" she called to Mrs. Hinckle. Her feet were almost skipping on the sticky kitchen floor. The smile that she gave the old lady embraced Flora, too.

"She's got a job," Flora said when Daphne and her toothbrush had vanished behind the bathroom door.

The old lady nodded, dipping bread into her coffee, softening it for her toothless gums, and waited, sharp old eyes on the door.

Flora waited, too, wrapping her faded Japanese kimono tighter around her thin body, dangling a slipped foot impatiently.

"Well, what's the good word?" she shouted when Daphne came back glowing and a little shivery from her cold shower. "Hot and cold water," Miss Viola always explained to the roomers, but only the cold would run.

"Oh—nothing," Daphne said, still smiling, still filled with inner warmth and happiness.

"Get a job yet?"

"No—"

Instantly Flora was all sympathy. "Well, can you beat that? You and me both!" But she threw her head back and laughed her big, hearty laugh, showing even white teeth. "Something'll turn up. I've got a boy friend scouting for me, and I think I'll get one as social secretary for an old dame out in San Mateo if he can't get me one of the papers. I used to write society on a morning paper up in Portland, but it looks like somebody'll have to die before I get a chance here."

"Somebody's looking out for me, too!" Daphne hadn't meant to say that, it just slipped out.

"Oh!" Flora looked at Daphne with new interest.

"I just met him last night. I was feeling so blue and down and out and thinking I never would find anything, and now I'll bet I got something today. Doesn't it make you feel different to find a friend?"

Flora interrupted her with a nudge, and Daphne realized that the old lady was speaking. "I always got plenty of coffee. Some don't like it, aber it's there on the back of the shove—"

"You ought to try it, it's fine!" Flora put in good naturedly.

"Oh—I'd love to!" Daphne murmured, with another beaming smile.

"Take a chair," Mrs. Hinckle grumbled; "don't stand up. You got plenty of time to drink it sitting down."

And there they were, Daphne and Flora McCordle and old Mrs. Hinckle, all sipping coffee at the kitchen table, old friends.

Daphne's voice ran along happily telling all about the blue, lonely days, about the employment secretaries that thought she looked too young, and Mr. Gartz, and the coffee house near the ferry, and Ralph McKeivitt, who was an old family friend and bobbed up in the nick of time.

"Well, for heaven's sake!" Flora encouraged. "Can you beat that?"

She believed it all, except the part about the "family friend."

"Heavens, what does she take us for, rubes?"

But Daphne didn't know what Flora was thinking. She told it all out of her full heart, and only stopped talking when the kitchen clock struck eight and it was time to begin the search for work.

She rode downtown with Flora and paid Flora's fare out of the ten dollars Ralph had given her.

"Goodbye," Flora called after her when they parted. "Good luck!"

"Good luck to you!" Daphne called back. She had her luck already.

A great wave of pity for all the

"I said I got a job!" she repeated.

HULMEVILLE, Sept. 19.—The Bristol Twilight All-Stars came to Hulmeville and took over the strong Hulmeville All-Stars after 13 innings of tight pitching, Saturday.

Foster started for Hulmeville and by previous agreement left the game in the sixth inning in favor of Arthur McCarthy, who twirled the balance of the game. McCarthy should have won in regulation time but his unfield support was wobbly.

Two Women, One A Resident Here, Die in Accidents

O'Mara, 32, of 1312 Walnut street, and Miss Nancy Iferson, 28, of 5326 Akron street, Philadelphia, had been attending a party near Bristol. They left the place shortly after 3 o'clock Sunday morning and when near Knights Road, Winnemore lost control of his car. It swerved to the side of the road and after striking one tree bounded off and crashed into another one. The impact was so great that the car was demolished, the top being hurled about fifty feet.

O'Mara and Miss Iferson, who were in another car a short distance behind the Winnemore machine, took the victims to the hospital.

Highway Patrolmen Lehr and Diem said yesterday that Winnemore would be arrested on a technical charge of manslaughter when he is discharged from the hospital.

Three persons were treated by a Langhorne physician after a car driven by Harold Madison, of Philadelphia, crashed into a machine operated by Leo F. Hess, of 210 South Sixth street, Columbia, Pa., after pulling out from behind a truck near Fallsington. The injured included Hess, Walter Morris, who was riding with Madison, and Miss Marion Troupe, of Columbia, who was a passenger in the machine driven by Hess. All sustained cuts and bruises.

In the second crash, Doris Foerst, 19, of 5734 Frankford avenue, was taken to the Frankford Hospital with lacerations and abrasions. She was riding with Sheldon Ackerman, of Philadelphia, when their car figured in a crash with a machine operated by Robert B. Johnson, of 600 Spruce street, Camden. Sylvia B. Stokes, 19, of 3041 East Thompson street, Philadelphia, who was a passenger in the Johnson vehicle, was also cut by flying glass. She was sent to her family physician. Both drivers were held in $500 bail for a hearing before Justice of the Peace Keating.

Anthony Penn, of 2837 East Tilton street, Philadelphia, who walked away from the scene after his car hit another machine, was fined $10 by Justice of the Peace Keating after being arrested by Highway Patrolman Coughlin.

EDGELY-HEADLEY MANOR GAMES AT DEADLOCK

EDGELY, Sept. 19.—The baseball series between the Edgely A. C. and the Headley Manor Fire Company went into a deadlock at one each here yesterday when the Edgely nine triumphed over the fire-eaters, 9-3.

In the hard fought game between married and single men of Hopkins Lodge, I. O. O. F., at Emille, yesterday, the single men won out by the score of 4-3. D. Still pitching for the single men allowed six hits, while Ashby for the married men allowed but five.

This is the first game of a series of three and the next game will be played at Edgely next Sunday morning. This should prove to be a very good game. Now that the single men have won the first game, the married men are out to win the next two. H. Morrell and L. Hibbs were the Stars for the married men while B. Prall and W. Bruce starred for the single men.

TULLYTOWN, Sept. 19.—In a hard-fought game here yesterday afternoon, the Third Ward Nomads nosed out the Tullytown A. A. by the score of 4-3. The Warders rallied in the last two frames to beat out the locals.

Luciano's one-base hit with Dugan on second base scored the winning tally in the last canto after the Bristol team had tied the count with two tallies in the eighth.

Tullytown's hurler, "Russ" Carman, hurled a fine calibre of ball but three errors by Leigh, his teammate, upset him in the eighth inning and enabled three runs to cross the platter.

"Jimmy" Lake was the winning hurler, fanning nine of the home team batters and giving up but seven hits.

GAMES PLAYED HERE

On St. Ann's field here yesterday the St. Ann's nine defeated the Hibernians, 5-4, with a last ditch rally in the last frame, which featured "Bill" Fine's home-run.

On Saturday, the Hibernians defeated the Scranton Giants, 8-7, in a hard-fought game on Sullivan's field.

PEACE LOVING WILLIAM PENN

(By Catherine Curran Smith)

One bright morning in October, Sixteen hundred and eighty-two, A ship sailed up the Delaware. Where she landed her gallant crew. They sought neither gold nor riches. Just a living from the sod, And in their humble exile Freedom to worship God.

No powdered wigs adorned the heads Of these quaint garbed Quaker men; Simplicity was the keynote Of their leader, William Penn. Who guided them so nobly. By his wisdom and his care He averted a bloody massacre With the war-like Delawares.

Between the Indians and these white men Grew bonds of Christian charity In a mutual understanding Of the one great Deity. Watching this pale face kneel in prayer, The Indians soon found What this Quaker called his Heaven Was their Happy Hunting Ground.

He traded with the Indians Beneath the Treaty Tree, And purchased for posterity Religious liberty. May this priceless heritage of Penn, Which we enjoy so free, Be upheld by Pennsylvania In his sacred memory.

Get Your Hunting License

As of September 1, every County Treasurer in the Commonwealth has been furnished a supply of hunting licenses for the 1932 season. And everyone going afield, with or without a gun or dog, to pursue, take or kill any sort of game animal or bird whatsoever must have such a hunting license with him, except that a bona fide farmer may hunt on the land on which he resides, and on the lands adjoining and immediately connected with his land, without a license if he has the owner's express consent.

This exception also applies to the farmer's immediate family residing on the land, and to those regularly in his employ residing on the land and assisting in its cultivation, but not even to children whose permanent and legal residence is elsewhere, nor to help employed only from time to time, and not residing on the land and regularly assisting in its cultivation.

Even in hunting unprotected game (such as groundhogs) a license is required. Snakes are the only things which may be killed without a license.

The hunting license will cost two dollars ($2.00) this year, as usual, and must be purchased by every person intending to hunt. The metal tag must be displayed in the proper location on the back and the license paper properly signed. Failure to comply with provisions of this act will subject the offender to the payment of penalties prescribed by law.

BOARD OF GAME COMMISSIONERS. ERNEST E. HARWOOD, Secretary.

The principal, Theodore Gottlieb, announces that there are 193 pupils in grades six to twelve in the new school, while 116 of the lower grades are using the old school on the hill. Sixty-three high school pupils are from outside districts, 17 from Upper Makefield Township; five from Buckingham, and 51 from Solebury. This crowded condition prevents the assembling of the entire high school at one time, and half of the school is brought together while the other half has class meetings, awaiting their assembly the following week.

Some few years ago a consolidated school was proposed for the districts in this part of Bucks County but nothing was accomplished because of inability to have New Hope and Solebury Township agree on a location.

From the trend of pupils toward the New Hope High School since it was erected it looks as if consolidation is going to be effected anyhow. The plan on which the new school is erected makes it easy to add additional rooms or another wing. An auditorium can also be built in the centre if desired. Although no proposal of this kind is now made, the present congestion indicates the possibility of expansion soon.

her uncle in England, she frequently attended the receptions given to the foreign ministers by the king, who on one occasion led her in the dance, after which he complimented her on her beauty and gracefulness. During her stay in England she was known as the American beauty. Shortly after the major's return home, John Hare Powell made her acquaintance and courted her with a view to marriage. When he solicited her consent she referred him to her aunt. When he called upon the old lady she listened to his pleadings and replied: "Mr. Powell, you ask my consent to your marriage with my niece. My answer is Miss Sarah L. Keene is intended for the son of a duke or a lord and not for the son of a brewer!" The gentleman picked up his hat and departed and the courtship ended. John Hare Powell married and became one of Philadelphia's honored and enterprising citizens. Miss Sarah died an old maid. She deigned her beautiful mansion on the river bank, its furniture and several thousand dollars to the Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal

They Satisfied in '17
and you can't Beat 'em Today

THIS picture will bring back memories to a lot of people of the days when the boys went marching away with flags flying and bands playing.

Chesterfields were very popular with those men who went overseas. They were "rookies" then. They're "old vets" today. And that milder, satisfying Chesterfield flavor is still their steady choice... after fifteen years!

It was mildness that first attracted smokers to Chesterfield. And it's mildness and better taste that is winning new friends for Chesterfield today... all over the country.

Next time you're short of cigarettes, ask for Chesterfields. They satisfied in '17, and you can't beat 'em today.
